

This week, I studied Chapters 1 and 2 using those PowerPoint slides. Since I'm learning from home, some things were a bit tricky to get. So, I looked into the textbook for more help, trying to understand things better. It showed me that using different ways to learn is very important.

One big challenge was not having classmates and faculty around to ask questions. To fix that, I went online to find study resources like videos and medium articles. They helped me understand things better and made me feel less alone in my learning journey.

Another problem was getting distracted at home. To fix this, I set up a special spot just for studying. It really helped me focus without all the usual distractions.

Looking back, I realized not having classmates and a faculty around was such a big deal. Online resources are good alternatives but the learning environment in class is better suited for me. It taught me that asking for help can happen in different ways, not just in person. This week made me appreciate the power of online communities in learning.

Dealing with distractions also taught me the importance of having a neat and quiet place to study. It's about finding what works best for me. Learning isn't just about books; it's also about figuring out how to learn in a way that suits me best.
